

Loire

The Loire Valley Vineyard stretches from the west coast Nantes area with its bone dry, sea-fresh Muscadets, through to Central Loire also known as France's garden with sweeter Vouvrais and dry fruity Touraine Sauvignon. From there it flows to the Upper Loire, the Central Valley - almost in the centre of the country - and home to the villages of Pouilly Fumé, Sancerre and Menetou-Salon, with their superb minerally, flinty wines. The area is the biggest producer of white wine in France, and produces 20% of all the country's wine. The UK is the biggest export market for the Loire region and the wines are perfectly suited to the abundance of fresh fish and seafood found on menus across the South West.
